PREFACE

We here at INTERNATIONAL, the pioneer manufacturer of Class "D" Citizen Banders, again take pleasure in bringing to you the ONLY compiled listing of all Class "D" Citizen Band licensees. This issue contains all licenses that were issued by the Federal Communications Commission from July 1, 1960 to January 1, 1961 and two previous editions contains all prior issues.

The issuing of Class "D" Citizen Band licenses has continued at the tremendous rate of approximately 8,000 per month and if this continues by years' end there will be one quarter million licensed Citizen Banders and an estimated one million transceivers on the air in the United States. Other countries are considering the feasibility of a Citizens Radio Service also in the 11 meter band.

The helpful comments, suggestions and support of Citizen Banders is gratefully acknowledged and has encouraged INTERNATIONAL in our effort of making the Call Book a part of the CITIZEN Radio Service.

A TRANSISTORIZED PORTABLE CITIZEN BAND FREQUENCY METER

TO MEASURE YOUR FREQUENCY

The F.C.C. regulations state that the transmitter used in citizen equipment must maintain a tolerance of ± .005% from 0° F to 125° F. To meet this the equipment should be well within .0025% when measured at room temperatures. At 27 mc this is roughly within 650 cycles.

To determine this frequency error the output of the transmitter should be compared with a secondary frequency standard having an accuracy of at least .0025%. An accuracy of .001% is far better and allows for some temperature error.

Your measurement is no better than the standard against which it is measured, and your standard is no better than the primary standard against which it is calibrated. The transmitter frequency of your equipment should be checked at least every six months and whenever a new crystal is installed.

The INTERNATIONAL C-12B FREQUENCY METER meets all F.C.C. requirements for the check and alignment of Class "D" transmitters. Easy to operate and completely portable, it allows versatility never before available in a reasonably priced secondary frequency standard. Check the features; check the specifications. International's years of outstanding frequency-measurement engineering are "built in" this instrument!

The International C-12B portable secondary frequency standard is a self contained unit designed for use in servicing radio transmitters and receivers used in the 27 MC range Citizen service. The meter is capable of holding twenty-four crystals and comes with twenty-three crystals installed. The twenty-three crystals cover channels 1 thru 23 (26.965 MC to 27.255 MC). The frequency accuracy of the C-12B is ± .0015% 32° F to 125° F. Additional built-in features are the AM percentage modulation checker and power output meter. The PK (pick-off) box, dummy load, and connecting cable supplied make it an ideal and simple instrument to use.

LICENSING OF CLUBS IN THE CITIZENS RADIO SERVICE

From time to time the Commission has received applications for radio station licenses in the Citizens Radio Service, submitted by or on behalf of organizations which identify themselves by the use of various descriptive titles such as "Citizens Band Radio Club", "Hometown Motorcycle Club", "Lakeside Yacht Club", etc. The licensing of these clubs presents different problems in each case, but certain of the most common problems or questions which are raised by such applications are discussed below.

"Citizens Band Radio Clubs", regardless of the particular name chosen in a given case, present one distinct problem which will be discussed first. Such clubs are capable of playing an important and useful part in the self-regulation of the Citizens Radio Service, when they function to promote equitable solution of mutual interference problems and a better understanding of the basis and purpose of the service, and are encouraged by the Commission to organize for those purposes. However, the need for a radio club, to hold a station license in the Citizens Radio Service is difficult to visualize. Presumably, each radio club member holds a radio station license in his own name and, if the Commission's rules were complied with when using the club station, any proper substantive messages could be transmitted over the individually owned and licensed stations of the club members. Accordingly, it does not appear likely that this type of club can show a proposed proper use for communication sufficient to warrant a grant of license in the public interest.

With respect to all club stations, it must be emphasized that the Commission will not countenance the use of a "Club" station or the operation of equipment under a "club" license as a subterfuge to avoid the five-minute limitation contained in its rules, on intercommunications between units of different stations. It should be noted that recent revisions of Section 19.61, Permissible Communications, of Part 19 of the Commission's rules, Citizens Radio Service, spell out clearly certain restrictions on the nature and time of a citizens radio station's communications. Stations in the Citizens Radio Service are not intended for the pursuit of radio communication as a hobby and, except in the emergency situations outlined in Sections 19.61 (d), 19.61 (k) and 19.93 of the Rules, the provisions of Sections 19.61 (a) and (c) which limit communications between citizens radio stations to those necessary for the exchange of substantive messages relating to the business activities or personal affairs of the licensee must be strictly observed. Persons desiring to pursue radio communication as a hobby should refer to Part 12 of the Commission's Rules and should apply for license in the Amateur Radio Service.

Even those "clubs" which are organized for purposes which require some legitimate use of radio, such as yacht clubs, often appear to be very loosely held together with little or no control or supervision of the related activities of their individual members. As a result, serious questions may be raised by an application from such a club as to whether adequate control and supervision of the individual radio units can be maintained at all times by the licensee as required by Section 19.92 of the Commission's rules. Such control must be sufficient to prevent the use of the radio station as a hobby in itself, and must be adequate to insure that all communications transmitted are in compliance with Section 19.61 of the rules as well as insuring compliance with all other technical and operational regulations governing the stations. Clubs which fail to qualify as corporations, but class themselves as partnerships or associations, should submit with their applications copies of their constitutions, by-laws, or other formal organization papers together with complete lists of their officers and members. The purpose of the club should be clearly stated in the papers presented, since that purpose will be assumed by the Commission to be the principal purpose for which the radio authorization is desired.

Applications are also frequently received from private groups organized for emergency or civil defense purposes. In some cases these groups are actual auxiliaries to civil defense or law enforcement agencies. In such cases it is necessary that the governmental agncy involved indicate its sponsorship and approval of the group if the station license cannot be held by that government entity. If such a group is not officially sponsored and approved the organization will be considered to be simply another type of club, and its application will be handled as indicated above. Here also it may be noted that any station licensed in the Citizens Radio Service may be used for the transmission of substantive messages concerning activities in which its licensee is personally engaged at that time and, at the option of its licensee, may also be used for the transmission of messages relating to Civil Defense activities under the conditions described in Section 19.93 of the Rules. Hence, the need for an organization license is not clear unless the "club" has a clubhouse or other fixed installation with which the members will need to communicate on club business.

Club members and club officers, in any of the foregoing cases, should particularly note the provisions of Section 19.12 of the Rules, which specify that not more than one person shall be eligible as licensee of the same transmitting equipment. Since by definition most organizations are legal persons, individually owned and licensed equipment may not be also operated under a club or other organization license without actual transfer of the ownership and control of the equipment in each case.

CITIZENS RADIO SERVICE LICENSE SERIAL NUMBERS

In the Citizens Radio Service each authorization is assigned a serial number which consists of one or two digits, a letter, and four additional digits. For example, a possible serial number may be written thus: 14D3896. The first two digits designate the number of the Citizens Radio Service call area in which the licensee has his address (there are 24 of these areas). The letter is an arbitrary symbol at present, but will indicate the year of issuance beginning next year, as explained below. The last four digits are a straight serial number.

Heretofore, since these license serial number are required by the Rules to be used as call signs, the Commission has endeavored to continue the same serial number from license to license for the same licensee. The sudden growth of the Citizens Radio Service, however, has forced the Commission to utilize the simplest practicable administrative procedures in order to handle the workload. Such procedures require that every license issued be treated as a completely new one and that a new serial number be assigned in every case. This means that "modified" and "renewed" licenses will carry a new serial number. The former serial number is thereby superseded and may no longer be used to identify the station.

Beginning January 1, 1961 a new letter will be used for the serial numbers issued during each calendar year. A series of seven letters (the letters Q through W) will be used and repeated each seven years. This will further simplify the administration of the service and will add significance to the serial numbers when heard on the air.
